

Identifying the Signs and Symptoms of Addiction

If you recognize any of these behaviors in your loved one, it is likely they are suffering from substance use disorder (SUD):

- Habitually covers up the truth or denies the truth, even when it is obvious
- Manipulates people or situations to keep them confused
- Acts impulsively without considering the consequences of their choices
- Difficulty listening to others' concerns • Preoccupied with using
- Struggles with relationships
- Misses work/school often, performance suffering
- Health problems related to misuse of substances • Makes promises without following through
- Forgetful of words and actions
- Seeks financial support on a regular basis, but unable to account for it
- Blames others for their life problems
- Does not take responsibility for their actions
- Does not understand or accept how their actions and behaviors affects family and friends
